

My son's biggest challenges were remembering assignments, getting them done, and turning them in on time, which led to arguments about homework. Time management is definitely better but [it's a work in progress]. Getting work done on time has vastly improved, and participation in class has gone up. I think the results have been both subtle and powerful. We are in a much better place than we were a year ago!