

“In the past, my son spent long hours unsuccessfully on homework. My frustration with him not finishing, and his frustration with being treated as a child, was a strain on our relationship. My goal was to give him tools to become more independent and to have him take ownership of his work and feel empowered. My son now gets his homework done in a much shorter time and can enjoy free time in the afternoon. Our relationship has improved. I don’t have to constantly nudge him. He feels more competent and confident as a result. We now frequently talk about how nice it is to complete a task in an efficient manner and to be able to move on to fun activities. Thank you for working with us!”